Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the United States Department of Justice,

I am writing to you concerning the Microsoft Settlement. I believe that the cause of Microsoft having 90 percent of the browser market share is obviously, Internet Explorer being included in the Microsoft operating system. Therefore, I think that Microsoft should pay Netscape a large enough amount of money so that Netscape will be reimbursed for the terms they suffered, including a loss of customers. Yet, this reimbursement will not suffice Netscape to be completely prosperous unless Microsoft goes bankrupt with the loss of money. Along with the reimbursement, Microsoft should have to guarantee that further releases of operating systems will not include the Internet Explorer program.

Sincerely,
